Questionmark's New Tools for Managing Test Results

Eric Shepherd, CEO, Questionmark

Abstract

In a perfect world, all assessments would be fair, reliable and valid. Students would enter a test having received exactly the same level and quality of instruction. There would be no ambiguously worded questions. There would be no data entry errors resulting in mis-keyed choices. And students would never feel compelled to appeal the results of a test.

However, the world is not perfect – and tests and exams aren't always perfect the first time out. Sometimes questions need to be dropped or scoring changes made and it is important to see how these changes impact the overall performance of the assessment. This session will demonstrate the latest tools and practical solutions from Questionmark for helping you evaluate test and exam results, make authorized changes, and publish them for use.
